Page Sharp Candler

About the Artist:

Page Sharp Candler is a retired clay artist.

A graduate of Virginia Commonwealth University with a BFA, she is a former member of the American Crafts Council, the Kentucky Guild and the Kentucky Market.

Page began her career by exhibiting at retail art shows and fairs up and down the East Coast.

Moving to Kentucky in 2004 and learning wood-firing sparked an interest in the earthy tones and textures of natural materials. This led to an exploration of basketry, where she began weaving with locally sourced materials like honeysuckle, oak, hickory, and willow, sometimes incorporating clay pieces into those forms. She has always been interested in following the sinuous lines of nature inherent in the materials she uses.

Page finds inspiration in the rhythms of the land where her artwork serves as a meditation on the connection between maker, material, and the natural world.
